All other forms of entertainment considered, going out to eat is the one ticket everybody buys, whether it's fast-food cheap seats, big-steak luxury boxes or the chicken-fried arena seating in-between. Let American-Statesman and austin360.com restaurant critic Mike Sutter be your all-access guide to the Central Texas dining-out scene.

In more than two decades

According to Zagat's "America's Top Restaurants" guide for 2011, Austin is still a little bit country and little bit wok-n-roll. A barbecue joint is our most popular, but we like the food best at a Japanese sushi-fusion place.
